The problem I have is that I need to press the F5 key twice for Windows to recognize the apps shortcut. See attached images I have tried various versions of Windows 10 but this is the one that gives me this problem. I have the latest version of the app. I'm trying to run Ubuntu alongside Windows 10. I have 4 partitions on HDD. I have set up Windows 10 to be installed on C: and I want to install Ubuntu on D: and E:. I have read that I can't have more than 4 primary partitions. I don't want to delete partitions as I have no idea how to do that. In the computer, I have only one primary partition on C: and one on D:. I tried everyones advice and nothing works. I followed this: to a T. I backed up C: in case I messed up anything on it. I have a backup image of my C: disk that I made with Win10. I tried making a dual-boot with EasyBCD but I don't want to mess up the partition. I want it to boot into either Windows or Ubuntu but not both. The computer has a 32GB SSD. I also have a HDD that is only 100GB. My main purpose is to install Windows 10 on the SSD and Ubuntu on the HDD. I want to be able to boot into any of them in a moment's notice. The procedure I followed: I tried changing the file before the post. That did not work for me. Thanks. A: It looks like what you want is the persistent partition option. My experience with this is that it is usually a bad idea to use it. Why? Because the system fails to boot if that partition gets out of sync with the rest of the system. Instead of it booting and continuing to boot, it will just start to boot Windows, and then stop. You will get a black screen and the command line,
